COL. LOGAN LAUDS RED CROSS

Commander of 101st Stimulates Boston's Great Effort in $100,000,000 Drive

Colonel Edward L. Logan, who as commander of the 101st Regiment has under his charge most of the Boston boys on the fighting lines in France, pays a splendid tribute to the Red Cross for the great work it has done for the men of the 101st, in a letter to his friend, James J. Phelan.

The appreciation he shows of the Red Cross and his description of what it is doing to make boys from this State comfortable is particularly timely, in view of the $100,000,000 Red Cross drive in which Boston is now making a great effort. So rapidly are contributions pouring in here that clerks are working night and day to account for them, and even now are unable to keep up with the flood of gifts.

This is Colonel Logan's tribute to the Red Cross:

COLONEL LOGAN'S TRIBUTE

"The Red Cross has been very active, very efficient and very helpful. Shortly after our arrival at this place I learned that Major James H. Perkins of Boston, now head of the Red Cross in France, whom I know very well, was here as a major and working with the Red Cross.

"I asked Father Michael J. O'Connor, one of our regimental chaplains, upon a trip which he made to Paris for me on business, to call on Major Perkins, and Scott, who was also of my class and is working for the Red Cross at Chaumont, came here and gave us a supply of cigarettes, which were distributed gratis. They also sent up here for distribution in hospitals pajamas, bed clothes, bathrobes, stockings and hospital equipment, and

U. S. TROOPS GET BEST OF HUNS IN RAIDS

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—The continued success of American patrolling parties is shown in General Pershing's daily communique, made public this afternoon by the War Department. The Americans are continuing to get the better of all patrolling skirmishes and to bring in prisoners.

The communique, dated May 21, follows:

"Section A—On the course of reconnaissance combat in Lorraine we captured prisoners. Here and in Woevre, artillery of both sides was considerable activity.

"Section B—Last night in Lorraine patrolling was very active, especially from our side. One patrol, consisting of an officer and twenty men exploring a hostile position, gained contact and opened fire on a German patrol of approximately the same size. The German patrol took cover and returned fire. Our patrol rushed position, put enemy to flight and captured two prisoners. One prisoner died of wounds after reaching our lines. Our patrol suffered no casualties.

"Later in the night a hostile patrol attempted to rush one of our outposts, but was driven off by rifle fire. One German was killed and his body brought into our lines."

McCall Thanks MacFarland for 'L' Bill Aid

The following letter was received today by Grenville S. MacFarland of the Boston AMERICAN from Governor McCall:

May 22, 1918.

My Dear Mr. MacFarland:

I send you herewith one of the quills with which I have just signed the bill for public operation of the Elevated Railway, in token of your earnest, early and effective advocacy of the bill.

Very truly yours,
SAMUEL W. McCALL.

DUTCH PROTEST U. S. SEIZURE OF SHIPS

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Holland does not consider that the United States satisfactorily justified its seizure of the Dutch ships which were taken over in American ports and now are in the American transport service.

In a long communication to the State Department, replying to the original explanation made by the United States affirming its right to make the seizure under international law, Holland has taken the position that the reasons set forth therein were not sufficient under international law to justify the action.

Holland, it is understood, specifically points out why it believes the United States was in the wrong.

SENATE VOTES FOR AIRCRAFT PROBE

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—After two weeks of parliamentary manoeuvring the Senate this afternoon reached an amicable settlement in the controversy over the Chamberlain resolution and authorized a searching congressional inquiry into the aircraft situation.

Without a murmur of protest the Senate adopted a substitute for the Chamberlain resolution giving the Senate Military Affairs Committee wide powers to investigate not only aircraft, but all other war work under control of the War Department as well.

90,000 SENT OVER IN 10 DAYS OF MAY

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Ninety thousand American soldiers were transported to Europe during the first ten days of May, Representative Caldwell of New York announced on the floor of the House this afternoon.

The American army now numbers 2,038,222, according to figures supplied today by the War Department," Caldwell said. "Of the total, 148,328 are officers and 1,889,984 enlisted men.

"Today we have an army of more than 2,000,000," he added, "of which 500,000 have already been shipped to France and a million more have had the necessary training to fit them for foreign service. These are now waiting for boats to carry them over."

"Notwithstanding that the appropriation measure now pending is to support an army of only 3,000,000, I am confident that before many months deficiency appropriations will be necessary," Caldwell continued. "We will probably have between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 before the next fiscal year. The potential man power of America for a seven-year war may be conservatively estimated at 2,000,000 fighting men of recognized military age."

BRITISH CAPTURE GERMAN PRISONERS IN NIGHT RAIDS

BETHUNE SECTOR HEAVILY BOMBARDED WITH GAS SHELLS BY HUNS

London, May 22.—The British troops again carried out successful raids during the night, the War Office announced today.

German artillery was active in the sector of Dernancourt and there was also heavy shelling in the region of the forest of Nieppe (Flanders front). German guns bombarded the British positions north of Albert.

RAID ENEMY TRENCHES.

Southeast of Arras the British penetrated German trenches at two points and captured fourteen prisoners and a machine gun. Other raiding parties entered the German positions in the sectors of Locon, Nieppe forest and Meteren and north of the Ypres-Comines canal, taking prisoners. The Germans tried to raid a British trench north of Albert, but were repulsed.

The text of the official report follows.

"A number of successful raids were carried out during the night on different parts of the front. In the sector northeast of Arras we entered German trenches at two points and captured 14 prisoners and a machine gun.

CAPTURE PRISONERS.

"Other raiding parties brought back a few prisoners from the enemy's positions in the neighborhood of the Locon-Nieppe forest-Meteren sector. North of the Ypres-Comines canal sixteen prisoners were taken.

"A hostile raiding party that tried to approach our lines during the night north of Albert was repulsed.

"The enemy's artillery was active east of the forest of Nieppe, and the sector north of Bethune was heavily bombarded with gas shells."

There is violent artillery activity in the region of Hailles and Bennet wood (on the Picardy front, southeast of Amiens), the French War Office announced today. There was big-gun firing elsewhere on the battle front, also.

Patrols were active, especially in the sector of the Aisne river.

The text of the Paris communique follows:

"During the night there was violent artillery firing in the region of Hailles wood, Bennet wood and Piemont. There was great patrol and reconnoitring activity on the whole front, especially in the region of the Ailette. We raided enemy lines west of Maison de Champagne also. Two enemy coups de main were repulsed on the Woevre plain and in Lorraine.

American troops are on the Woevre and Lorraine fronts.

MAY USE MORE CAVALRY

The signs of an approaching attack by the Germans on the western front are the same as those which preceded the initial drive on March 21, says Hamilton Fyfe, war correspondent of the Daily Mail.

It is believed that the Germans will try to use cavalry more freely and a considerable number of tanks. In addition it is reported that the Germans are endeavoring to improve the rationing of their troops.

Prisoners say that German anxiety about the growing number of Americans in France is increasing. The Germans are greatly perplexed to hear of so many American troops on French soil and that more are arriving all the time. The German command is also anxious about the number and whereabouts of the allied reserve armies.

Germans Now Alarmed by Increasing Forces of Americans in France

By FRANK CHARLTON

International News Service Cable Editor.

Ever since Monday morning German artillery has been drenching the district immediately north of Bethune with a tempest of gas shells. The area is being saturated with poison. The official reports issued by the British War Office today and yesterday dwell upon the violence of the bombardment.

Bethune lies on the southern end of the Flanders battle front and is one of the local objectives of the Germans in their attempted sweep to the channel. It is a British railhead and base position of high strategic importance, and yesterday it was reported in flames from incendiary shells.

Bethune is between 11 and 15 miles northwest of Arras and lies at the junction of several canals. It is on the borderland of a stretch of hilly country that the Germans are viewing with covetous eyes.

So far as can be judged by the varying indications in the great battle, the Germans may be making preparations for a new drive in the direction of Bethune. The prisoners previously attempted to storm the British defenses of the town, but all their attacks broke down. They succeeded in pressing a salient into the British front north of Bethune and the wedge was driven as far as Robecq.

ONLY ARTILLERY FIRE.

Whether the Germans will renew their pressure in this zone of the battle front is only guess work, for there have been equally heavy bombardments at other points on the Picardy and Flanders battle fronts during the past three weeks without being followed up by infantry thrusts.

In the meantime, during the lull in the big scale operations, the French and British continue their retrieving raids with great success, winning back patches of ground here and there in both battle zones and improving and strengthening their positions. This will inevitably make the Germans' task much harder.

The surprise element is all gone now, and the Germans, knowing that they are going to meet with stubborn resistance, are making preparations with extreme caution and thoroughness. This work must be done under cover of darkness, for in daylight the sky swarms with armadas of allied airplanes which observe everything that is going on behind the Teutonic lines.

GERMANS GETTING WORRIED.

Another element which is coming to light through the medium of information obtained from German prisoners is that the German high command is becoming alarmed over the growing numbers of Americans that are taking their place on the front. Every once in a while the boys in khaki bob up in some unexpected place along the battle line and the Germans are surprised by finding themselves up against the sturdy sons of the great Western republic.

While the deadlock has continued, the allied reserve armies have been growing in strength, and it must be a source of fearful annoyance to the Germans not to know exactly where these reinforcements are.

Heroic Acts Performed by U. S. Aviators

CHASES BOCHE INSIDE LINES; DOWNS HUN

By NEWTON C. PARKE.

With the American Army in France, May 21.—Lieutenant William H. Taylor of New York today shot down a German two-seated machine over the German lines after one of the hottest fights yet seen on the Toul front. He chased the German machine twelve kilometers inside the German lines before he was able to down it.

This was only one of the air battles in this section today in which the Americans worsted the enemy. Two of our machines attacked two German machines, one of them fled in a hurry. The other went tumbling 4,000 feet. The pilot recovered out within 500 feet of the ground and escaped.

Taylor was flying at a height of 5,000 meters when he spotted the German machine. The German headed toward his own lines. After going twelve kilometers inside the German lines Lieutenant Taylor got within less than a hundred yards of the enemy. He poured hot shots into him. Taylor saw one of his incendiary bullets penetrate the enemy machine where the observer was working a machine gun. The enemy fire then ceased. Taylor then directed his fire at the pilot. In a moment the enemy machine toppled and went crashing to the earth in a nose dive.

There was very active patrolling last night both in the Toul and Luneville sectors. In the former region one of our patrols southwest of Abremont established contact with the enemy. The Americans drove off the Germans without suffering any casualties. Another patrol north of Abremont "killed" the cable which the Germans used to charge their barbed wire.

In the Luneville sector one of our patrols consisting of an officer and twenty men met an enemy patrol of sixteen. A sharp fight resulted. The enemy took refuge in an old trench, but the Americans attacked vigorously with hand grenades and rifles. They rushed the trench and captured two boches. One was so badly wounded that he died later.

A few hours later the enemy, by way of retaliation, attempted to rush one of our outposts, but our men were ready for him. The enemy was driven off, with casualties. One German body was brought in from no man's land after this engagement for purpose of identification.

DETROIT FLIER DIED FIGHTING 7 ENEMIES

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Stephen Potter of Detroit, who was officially given up for dead by the Navy Department last night, met his death on April 29 while in desperate combat with seven German seaplanes over the North Sea, the Committee on Public Information announced today. Six weeks before Potter had brought down a German plane over Heligoland Bight.

Potter, driving a British seaplane and accompanied by another plane, left a North Sea station for patrol duty. Two enemy planes were sighted, headed toward them and flying low. Both the British planes dived, about 100 yards apart, closed upon the nearest Hun and opened fire at close range.

After emptying one drum from the forward cockpit, Potter's companion's gun jammed.

Just then two more hostile planes appeared overhead, attacking vigorously. Both British machines pursued the lower enemy, who soon disappeared. Three others passed astern at a sharp angle. The British planes flattened out and ran westward at full speed close together for several minutes, under continuous volleys from the rear.

Four more enemy machines now appeared in V formation, of seven enemy planes in action, four were attacking Potter and the others his companion. Potter fell behind and began to "zigzag." His companion circled down to let Potter catch up, then began climbing to reduce headway.

Potter dodged again, but was then broadside to all the enemy machines and under their fire only fifty feet from the water. His companion, 250 feet above, saw Potter's machine burst into flames, and then crash on the port wing tip. Potter was last seen on the surface amid a huge cloud of smoke.

Two of the German machines circled over the spot, then joined the other five. When the pall had cleared, not even wreckage was visible.

DOWN 1,000 HUN PLANES IN 60 DAYS

One thousand Hun airplanes have been shot down or driven out of control since the German offensive started two months ago.

The aviation battle is waged practically all in the enemy's aerial territory.

The British Ministry of Information announces that 90 per cent. of combats in which British airplanes are engaged take place entirely over the German side of the battle lines.

During the past two months more than 1,000 tons of allied bombs have been dropped on or behind the Hun lines, causing terrific havoc to munition depots, aerodromes, railroad stations and other strategic points.

It is generally agreed, according to Paris dispatches today, that the aviators saved the allied armies in the German offensive. The airmen, says the Parisian Press, can win when they attack in numbers. Aviation, the Press adds, is now the most important battle arm of the allies. This statement is made apropos of the appeal of President Poincare for America to send thousands of airplanes and even paris-trained aviators to France.

RAID ON PARIS BLOCKED.

The defensive side of the allied aerial warfare waxes more and more efficient. German airplanes tried to raid Paris again last night but were forced back by a rolling curtain of fire that flamed against the sky from the French high-angle guns.

The Hun air squadrons tried for two hours and twenty minutes to get over the city proper, but the most they succeeded in doing was to penetrate to the outskirts of Paris, upon which bombs were dropped.

Early advices said that three persons were killed and several were wounded.

One Hun machine was shot down in flames north of Paris.

COMLENTZ IS BOMBED.

The allied drive continues its destructive work to points as far as the Rhine valley. London announced today that the city of Coblentz on the Rhine was bombed by British aviators yesterday morning. This follows a previous air raid on Cologne, the great Rhine valley manufacturing centre.

Additional reports received at London today from the Cologne raid said that enormous damage was done. Bombs struck the Town Hall, barracks and railroad station. Many recruits were killed. But the allied aviators were careful to avoid hitting the Cologne Cathedral.

Simultaneous with the raid on Coblentz was one on the powerful German fortress of Metz in Lorraine.

Thionville, Namur and Charleroi also were attacked.

Thirty-five tons of bombs were dropped to the battle area in these latest swoops.

Five British machines are reported missing by the London War Office. But that loss is trebly made up by announcement that fifteen Hun machines were brought down Monday.

LUSK DEFENCE WITNESSES TELL OF HEADACHES TO SHOW INSANITY

FAMILY ECCENTRICITIES RESURRECTED IN TRIAL OF WOMAN SLAYER

By International News Service.

Waukesha, Wis., May 22. — The ground work for the "insanity" defence of Miss Grace Lusk, on trial for murder of the wife of Dr. David Roberts, was laid today by her counsel. Physicians of the Lusk family, girl friends of Miss Lusk, school teachers and others were called to the stand and questioned about Miss Lusk's mental activities, her nervous condition and peculiarities.

This line of questioning was extended to include Dr. and Mrs. Lusk. Each line of questioning invariably led to testimony that Miss Lusk suffered "terribly from headaches."

Dr. Roberts, the other figure in the tow shattering love triangle, was almost forgotten during the testimony about the "headaches."

Dr. C. H. Owen of Merrill, Wis., was the first witness, and he said he lived in the Lusk home before Grace was born. He told how Dr. and Mrs. Lusk were of a highly nervous temperament and that Mrs. Lusk suffered severe headaches and would lose control of herself. He said the pair would quarrel "like cats and dogs."

TALK TO HIS HAT.

Dr. H. B. Hanan of Oregon, Wis., told of the eccentricities of Dr. Lusk. He said he had a "trick of hanging his hat on a nail and then talking to it." Another trick was one he practised while working on patients in his dental office. He laid pins out in a row and after looking at them a long time would put them in his purse and then resume his work.

Mrs. George Hale of Stoughton declared she had known Miss Lusk for thirty years and roomed with her while attending the Milwaukee Normal School. She said Miss Lusk "suffered terribly from headaches, which would prostrate her and leave her in a weakened condition." She said she saw her on the witness stand before the tragedy and she "was pale and drawn and seemed sad."

TELLS OF HEADACHES.

Miss Maude Schaeffer, a teacher, said she had been a classmate of Miss Lusk in 1899. She also testified about headaches Miss Lusk had while at the University of Wisconsin.

Miss Louisa Henika, another teacher, told of headache attacks.

Miss Lusk was to be called to the witness stand late today. She is anxious to tell her story.

"After that nothing matters," she said. "That is all I have to live for—to tell people the real truth. If I can tell them the truth and make them understand, I will have done my task. If I fail—well, if I am sent to prison I will die anyway in a few months."

Miss Lusk Gives Message to Women of the Nation Through Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Waukesha, Wis., May 22.—Grace Lusk has given me a message for all the women in the country. It was after her most trying day in court, when as one who comes back from the dead she heard recited the preparations she had made for the last chapter of her life and burial.

But one thing sustained her through that trying ordeal, the love of her father and,the loyalty of the friends who have stuck to her through thick and thin.

When she wrote the message for me the crowds of spectators had left the court-room, an ante-bellum hush but the little group whose faces have become familiar to those who attend the trial.

There was her good old father, who is four by every, Miss Myrtle Lund and Miss Barber, who have been like sisters.

GROUP OF FRIENDS.

There were also a group of women, some of whom were fellow teachers, some pupils, some who had lived in the same house with her at different times. And who had all come as witnesses for the defence, to testify to the unimpeachable reputation she had always borne.

With these faithful ones about her, she took my pencil and wrote:

Sometimes I wonder if another woman has suffered as I have suffered these hard months, these last tragical days.

Of course I know there must be others who have gone through the dark paths, sorrow is not for any one, but I can only hope that these others have fathers so loving, friends as loyal as mine.

(Signed) GRACE A. LUSK.

Some of the session had been devoted to treating of what might be called Grace Lusk's "apology" for the taking of her own life, which she had decided upon at the time she wrote the paper.

HER THEORY OF LOVE.

In it she reviews the unfortunate love that had brought her so much bitterness and unrest, and among other things, she says:

I have a theory that love between men and women was stronger than all the ceremonies in the world; when that was lacking there was no sanctity in marriage.

Since she wrote that, she has been forced to listen to the man she loved well enough to reverse the good, sound opinion that had been taught to believe in regard to love and marriage, repudiate her before the world, intimate that she was a vampire who pursued him and broke up his home.

I do not believe she holds such views in regard to marriage today; I think she has gone back to the sound views on family life that she was taught in her own home.

Her innate honesty is visible all through the paper. She had loved Roberts deeply enough to give him her life and her good name and she wanted his wife to know she did not want to continue to love him in secret any longer. In regard to this, she says:

Now that I have had to suffer, I am going to insist that he tell how matters stand, that he be honest with his wife, that if he will not, he is afraid and he will have to be afraid of me this time.

I am not the type of woman to be lied to; I am sorry, sorry, sorry that this has happened, and yet I had rather had this experience as it has been than to have gone through my life without knowing what love can mean.

And after a few more sentences the final paragraph:

I want him to forgive me, I just can't live as I have been living these last few weeks; I have been almost crazy with heartache and humiliation.

Sitting there, weeping on her brother's shoulder, Grace Lusk heard read, in the cool, even tones of the prosecutor, the quivering words that she had penned only a few days ago, and the document had once been sealed.

TRAGIC SENTENCES.

I could wish my bitterest enemy no bitterer fate, that she have to listen again to these tragic sentences and to know that the man for love of whom she killed, no one knows but herself, has made her life as empty, as every utterance merited the scorn and contempt of the world.

After the reading of this "apologia" her will was submitted that she be buried next to her mother's side in Wisconsin and that her funeral was not to cost above four hundred dollars. And she would be very glad if Mrs. Wescott would say the prayer at the end.

I think that perhaps my white new gray frock from Hellers will be ready for my last party, fresh underwear with a little top drawer. I want my turquoise pin with me and my two diamond rings.

Ask Jennie Hale and Mrs. Gregory if they will come out and straighten things out. Perhaps Maude Shafer will help. Ask Maude if she will please write any necessary letters.

I think that perhaps my white new gray frock from Hellers will be ready for my last party, fresh underwear with a little top drawer. I want my turquoise pin with me and my two diamond rings.

Ask Jennie Hale and Mrs. Gregory if they will come out and straighten things out. Perhaps Maude Shafer will help. Ask Maude if she will please write any necessary letters.

I should like my books, pictures, jewelry to her hosts of friends was a most orderly procedure. The little bequeathals, Oxford bookrack, the Worcester china, the portrait of Whistler's mother, were so many lines that portrayed the girl's personality far more clearly than her mad passion for the callow Doctor.

SHOWS HER STRUGGLES.

We got a picture of the conscientious young student who had put two years' work into medicine, who scraped and saved and managed to take the little trips to Europe that had meant so much to her, who saw a girl with the scores and scores of friends who have stood staunchly by her during this ordeal, but who had heart-rending picture with so much to pity, so much to pardon, so much to grieve for.

It was a relief, a grateful "let down" when Mrs. Mayme Ward was called. Mrs. Ward was a lady who felt that she was in her constitutional rights of health, wealth and the pursuit of happiness when she "listened in" on her party wire.

She told the court she had gone to the phone to talk to a friend when she heard some one called "Grace" threaten another and proceed to call all his letters to his wife "special delivery," and then she went about trying to match up the voices she knew as those among the residents of Waukesha, as conscientious shopper matches ribbon.

She confided in her mother, and she confided in another lady called "Darrell or Squirrel," and that lady proved to be the Sherlock Holmes that ferreted out the whole situation.

Mrs. Roberts' mother was also called to the stand, a quaint old figure in black. She had great difficulty in controlling her voice to give her testimony, and the district attorney asked about that last day and if she ever saw her daughter again after she had gone to the Mills House she broke down and wept.

It was by all odds the most dramatic day of a trial that has furnished more dramatic situations than any other in the memory of the State.

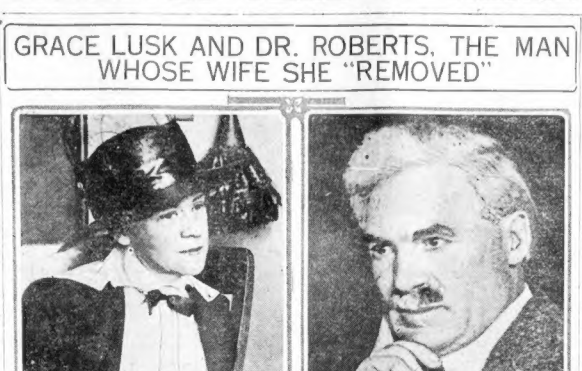
GRACE LUSK AND DR. ROBERTS, THE MAN WHOSE WIFE SHE "REMOVED"



© 1918 BY INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE.

EAGER TO HEAR MISS LUSK'S STORY

Waukesha, Wis., May 22.—Grace Lusk, self-confessed slayer of Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts, wife of Dr. David Roberts, took the stand today in her own behalf. Miss Lusk is near collapse, but it is believed she is able to tell her story.

What that story is, what attitude the defendant takes with regard to the scathing testimony of the last week by the man she loved and for whom she killed, no one knows but Miss Lusk. Not even to her aged father, or to her attorneys has she vouchsafed an outline of her recital.

The defence counsel and the defendant's father have been near her in her cell. The father pleaded with his daughter to cast aside any lingering regard she may have for Roberts and seek safety. But to no one did she give any indication of what she intends doing.

"I AM TIRED," SHE SAYS.

"I am tired," was all she would say.

Despite her state of near collapse after the conference with her father and her lawyer, Miss Lusk detailed to a reporter the happenings of that memorable afternoon when she shot to death the wife of the man she loved.

"The day Mrs. Roberts came," she said, "she insulted me terribly. She was with me a half hour I guess. I don't remember how long it was. But when she came in she began telling me of Dr. Roberts' affairs with other women. It was a new story to me. It was not a new story to her at all and she said that my relations with her husband was just another one of many that had marked his life.

"A woman can strike you and hurt you, but it is a little hurt that is soon over. The most awful injury that one woman can inflict on another one is to say to her what Mrs. Roberts said to me. If she had struck me with her fist it would not have been so bad. Her blow was infinitely worse than a physical blow."

"ONE OF LONG LINE."

"Don't think that Dr. Roberts cares for you,' she cried, tauntingly. 'You are just one of a long line of them. But together he and I have been able to manage the others and I thought that we could manage you.

"Then she told me about the girl who used to be Dr. Roberts' secretary, who had died in a rooming house here in Waukesha. She told me that the doctor had an affair with her. She died four years ago just before I came into his life.

"Then I told her something about one of her best friends. I said, 'Mrs. Roberts, I know of one affair he had, but he told me about it himself.'

"'Who was the woman?' she asked me.

"I told her. It was one of the most prominent club and suffrage women in the State of Wisconsin. She admitted to me, after some argument, that she had suspected the liason.

"When Mrs. Roberts found that I wasn't one of the many and didn't think myself a common woman she began calling me all of those terrible names, and they were beyond endurance."

HELP NEEDED ON THE FARMS; BIG FOOD PROBLEM

Thousands of Men and Boys Are Called for in Patriotic Summons

Farm-ward Ho!

The young manhood of Boston, New England and the country at large is in the field or warfare, risking life and limb in the cause of the States and Stripes.

Now the nation calls in civilians back home to take to the field of agriculture, not to risk life and limb, but still help win the war.

It is the great Farm Drive, which is being conducted by the United States Public Service Reserve of which Colonel William A. Gaston is director for Massachusetts.

While our soldiers are fighting for us in the battle trenches we are summoned to the furrows of the farm, to the noble and health-giving field of husbandry.

FOOD SUPPLY MENACED.

Every little bit helps. If a man cannot enroll for a summer of farm work he may be able to devote weekends and vacation to it.

Many city dwellers may well for vacations in the country. But Uncle Sam, in beckoning you to the farm drive, gives you wages in addition to the patriotic opportunity.

New England farms have been in hard hit by the demands of the draft and the inducement of higher wages in manufacturing lines, that the food supply for the coming Winter is seriously jeopardized. Officials of the Massachusetts Public Safety Committee and leading business men are already at work to stem the tide leading away from the farms and to increase the number of agricultural workers demanded by the critical situation which confronts New England.

Following the work of the enrollment agents of the Massachusetts branch of the United States Public Service Reserve in securing 25,000 men willing to help Uncle Sam build ships, all of the resources of this organization are now pledged to enrolling workers for farm food production.

Massachusetts enrolled 93 per cent. more than its quota of 14,321 shipbuilders. Thus far, it has but 22 per cent. in excess of its quota of 23,362 men.

ALL MUST HELP WORK.

In its appeal to the farmers of New England to notify the Public Service Reserve of the number of farm laborers needed, the committee pledges itself to the following action in return:

1—Sending letters to manufacturers employing a total of 800,000 men, asking them to release a definite number of men who have had FARM EXPERIENCE.

2—Enrolling agents of the U. S. Public Service Reserve and asking them to volunteer their services in enrolling farm help.

3—Spurring Massachusetts county agricultural agents to begin active work in co-operation with the U. S. Public Service Reserve.

4—Enlisting the full resources of the Massachusetts Committee of Public Safety Production to work on the problem.

5—Sending display posters to all post-offices and to every manufacturing concerns.

6—Securing the hearty co-operation of weekly newspapers, clergymen and college authorities to give fuller publicity to the movement to increase the supply of farm labor for New England.

7—Sending a letter urging farm journal publications have been taken by the Public Reserve group in order that the Publication may effectively before the farming population of New England.

EXEMPTION ASKED.

There being an insufficient number of skilled farm workers, the committee urges the adoption of the Canadian plan of using boys and unskilled men who will volunteer to do the work from patriotic motives. The Canadian food supply, it is pointed out, was largely increased by this kind of farm labor last Summer.

An appeal has been prepared for the city population in the hope of securing enrolments of clerks, business men and factory workers who have had actual farm experience. The appeal is worded as follows:

"Your country is in need of helpers on the farm. The lack of help will seriously affect the food supply. Our national safety is at stake. If you have had any farm experience we ask you to volunteer for work on a farm this Summer. Testify to your loyalty by enrolling now for farm service."

Unless the city dwellers awake to the urgent necessity of the rural population securing farm assistance immediately, the food problem during the coming year will become even more acute, say the officials of the U. S. Public Service Reserve.

It is planned to get the necessary workers to the farms at the earliest possible moment, because soon the time for planting will have expired.

75 MORE HARVARD MEN FOR PLATTSBURG CAMP

Seventy-five more Harvard men will be registered for instruction at the Plattsburg camp for under age students, it was stated today. One hundred men have already applied for the seventy-five vacancies.

He suggested that $6,000 a year by the day for the new commissioners.

VON MACKENSEN FOR DRIVE ON U. S. TROOPS

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Von Mackensen, the bitterest "American hater" in Germany, is to command the centre of the Amiens drive because so many Americans are taking their places in that line, according to a theory that has gained many supporters in both general staff quarters and in reports coming from General Pershing's offices overseas.

Washington heard that from Mackensen and probably von Falkenhayn have been summoned from the East to attend a conference of all German generals at German great headquarters. It is not expected that this conference will produce any vast changes in the general plan and tactics of the German attack, but it is expected that there will be many changes in command.

"It is not necessary to advise the American forces that if they face von Mackensen they will face an implacable foe," said one American officer. "I know myself directly that he has a supreme contempt and hatred for the Americans.

"He is an able man and has done big things for the German armies. For a time von Mackensen got the credit for beating General Cadorna in Italy. But that was wrong. Credit has now been given where it belongs, to General von Buelow. But von Mackensen did gain for Germany all of the victories in the east and southeast that turned over to the Central Empires Rumania and the Ukraine."

MOTHER SEES ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP HER GIRL

New York, May 22.—Mrs. Mary Keller sat at the window of her home waiting for her six-year-old daughter, Margaret, to return from school. It was raining and so Mrs. Keller was watching. Presently she saw her child running down the street. She left the window to open the door. As she did so she heard screams, which she recognized as her daughter's. Mrs. Keller saw Margaret struggling in the arms of a woman. The woman, who gave the name of Katherine McCabe, was caught and held on a charge of attempted kidnaping.

"JOSEPHUS DANIELS."

RICHARD BLODGETT, West Newton aviator killed while flying in France. He had been in the aviation service only three weeks.

Richard Blodgett of No. 176 Temple street, West Newton, son of Edward E. Blodgett, a Boston lawyer, was killed while flying in France, according to a message received by his father. Blodgett, who was twenty-one, left Williams College and went to France as an ambulance driver. He later became driver of an ammunition truck and then joined the air service. He had been flying only three weeks. A brother, also a Williams man, is in the army.

McADOO OUSTS ALL RAILWAY HEADS

Washington, May 22.—A federal manager is to be placed in immediate charge of each railroad property in the United States. He will be directly responsible to the federal regional director in his district, instead of to the board of directors of the road and will take the place of the president of the railroad as its operating chief.

Mr. McAdoo also announced that Walter D. Hines had been appointed assistant director-general of railroads. He previously was assistant to the Director-General.

Charges have been made repeatedly since the government took over the railroads that many of the road officials were not giving their full support to the railroad administration—that they were throwing monkey wrenches into the machinery. Predictions have been made frequently that Mr. McAdoo would make the situation such that there could be no possibility of false team work.

Whether the decision to place Federal managers in charge of the roads was the result of any suspicion the director general had could not be learned. Director-General McAdoo is still kept close at home by his illness.

But the removal of C. W. Huntington of New York, as president of the Virginian Railway was announced. J. H. Young of Norfolk, was named Federal director for the road. Mr. Huntington is removed as chief executive of the road, but is left head of the railway corporation. He must look to the corporation for his pay.

MYSTERY IN CHANGE.

Something of a mystery was made of this phase of the situation at the railroad administration. It was said Mr. Huntington had been set down because of difficulties with the administration over the question of betterments and transportation. His road's budget called for $21,731,247, but Director-General McAdoo chopped this $8,331,247.

Just whether this had a direct bearing on the matter is problematical. But it was said that there were other differences between Mr. Huntington and officials of the administration that went back much further.

BELGIAN BARONESS TO WED BRITISH OFFICER

New York, May 22.—Baroness Marguerite Elsie Oppenheim, a young Belgian widow, appeared at the marriage license bureau with Lieutenant James William Robbins. He described himself as an officer of the English army, stationed in Washington. They are to be married in St. Patrick's Cathedral this week, according to the Baroness.

SAXONS ARE EATING CAMELS, DOGS, HORSES

New York, May 22.—Camel meat, dog meat and horse meat are being eaten in Saxony by the poorer classes, according to the Berliner Tageblatt of April 7, a copy of which has been received here. The camel meat comes from the Mohair camels of the Hagenback menagerie, which gave a show in Zwickau in March.

MAY DRAFT MEN OF 18 TO 60, SAYS DANIELS

New Brunswick, N. J., May 22.—America is prepared to draft men from eighteen to sixty years old, if it becomes necessary to win the war, declared Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, in an address at the alumni dinner at Rutgers College. Mr. Daniels predicted that "before another Summer we will have enough ships to carry not only a million, but millions, to France, and enough destroyers to carry them in safety."

Previous to the dinner President W. H. Demarest of Rutgers had conferred upon Secretary Daniels the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws. Secretary Daniels said, in part:

"Young men in college, from eighteen to twenty-one, should stay in college until they reach the latter age. All the training they receive mental and military, fits them for a larger service.

"The young man of today have shown that they have the stuff. The first to enlist when the call came were college men. They were supposed to be soft and high brows. But every time I go aboard a ship and see these stalwart young men I am impressed with the astounding manner in which they have proved they have the stuff."

JAPANESE ARRESTED HERE DENIES KILLING

New York, May 22.—Charged with killing Shichisabro Hosaki in a quarrel over the prowess of their respective families, Hitoshi Mogi was arraigned and granted an adjournment to engage a lawyer. Mogi fled to Boston, where he was arrested. He denied having any part in the tragedy, but said he saw the man killed. The murderer was another Japanese named Roy Shaida, he told the court.

Do you know what happens to your skin when you bathe?

The right kind of bath does more than clean—it actually makes you feel better. See that you get the full benefits from your bath

YOUR skin regulates the temperature of your body. To keep your body at the right temperature, your skin throws off about two pints of perspiration every twenty-four hours. This perspiration contains acids.

You know how these acids discolor your clothing when you perspire freely.

Actual tests show that perspiration acids turn green cloth yellow and blue cloth red.

It is the acids in perspiration that make your skin smart so when it is chafed or broken.

If these perspiration acids and other impurities are not thoroughly removed, they accumulate until they prevent the skin from regulating the heat of the body and casting off further waste matter.

For broken or scraped skin there is nothing like washing it thoroughly with Lifebuoy. The antiseptic Lifebuoy has in it soothes the injured skin and helps it heal

Make the Lifebuoy bath a habit. Before long you will notice how the antiseptic this soap contains benefits your skin.

The effect of soap and water

When you bathe, water softens the skin. The soap separates into two parts: one part absorbs the impurities that are in the pores. The other part forms a lather which takes up these impurities as well as the dirt and dust and carries them all off.

Lifebuoy Health Soap does all this—and more. There is in Lifebuoy an antiseptic solution considered by medical authorities as one of the greatest aids to the health of the skin.

Note the structure of your skin through a magnifying glass. When you see all the tiny, open "mouths," you realize how important it is to keep your skin antiseptically clean

In lathering, Lifebuoy soap carries this antiseptic right into the pores of the skin. There it counteracts the effects of perspiration and waste matter which keep accumulating all the time.

Modern health authorities are teaching the value of prevention. "Don't neglect your health", they say. "Take care of yourself every day." It has been proved that people take cold when they are tired or run down. When your skin is not in perfect health it invites trouble.

Just what your skin needs to keep it healthy

With the right care, you can so easily keep your skin healthy; keep it in good condition to perform its important work for the body.

Just try a cake of Lifebuoy today! See how thoroughly its rich creamy lather cleanses. See how its antiseptic stimulates and refreshes the skin—tones it up. Nothing like it! It purifies every pore—leaves the body antiseptically clean—keeps your skin clear, lovely, glowing with health!

The odor tells you why

The "health" odor in Lifebuoy is found in no other soap. It is not a perfume—not the odor of a medicine—but a pure, hygienic odor that tells you instantly why the soap benefits your skin. Stimulating, invigorating, refreshing!

"I thoroughly enjoy Lifebuoy—it gives the skin the protection everyone needs"

Julian Eltinge

One whiff of Lifebuoy and you realize why it cleanses so thoroughly—why it purifies and protects—why it improves your skin.

Begin using Lifebuoy, the "health" soap, today for your face, hands and bath. Get a cake at any grocery or drug store.

NATIONALISTS TO RETURN TO LONDON

John Dillon Declares Against Resort to Arms; Plan More Sinn Fein Arrests

By International News Service.

London, May 22.—John Dillon, leader of the Irish Nationalists, declared in an interview in the Daily Express today that the Nationalist members of parliament would return to London, but that the date was uncertain.

The Nationalist members of parliament have been active in Ireland for some time attempting to solve the difficult Home Rule and conscription problems.

Mr. Dillion deprecated the use of Sinn Fein tactics and stated that he had no sympathy with those who would use arms.

He was skeptical as to whether the government would be able to introduce a Home Rule bill, and said he was unable to understand the attitude of the government toward the charges that have been made against the arrested Sinn Feiners.

Additional Sinn Fein arrests are expected in Ireland, said a Dublin dispatch to the Evening Standard. Count Plunkett, one of the Sinn Fein members of parliament, who was arrested, has been brought to England.

Copies of Lord French's proclamation forbidding Sinn Fein meetings have been covered with manifestoes issued by the standing committee of the Sinn Fein, the Dublin dispatch said.

Numerous Sinn Fein sympathizers in South Ireland have gone into hiding, it is reported, fearing arrest.

BIDDLE, HURT IN AIR FLIGHT, IS IMPROVING

Paris, May 22.—The condition of Captain Charles J. Biddle of Andulasia, Pa., an aviator in the Lafayette escadrille, who was forced by a wound to land in No Man's Land, was today reported to be satisfactory. Biddle was previously reported missing, but was afterwards found in No Man's Land and taken to the hospital.

VERMONT BABY FIRST TO BE NAMED FOR PERSHING

Baby Pershing Leonard Foye of Rutland, Vt.

I am Baby Pershing Leonard Foye of Rutland, Vermont, if you please, and although I am only six weeks old I'm doing the very the very best that I can to grow up fast and be a credit to my country. And because my daddy is in France, fighting with General Pershing's forces, my mamma named me Pershing. I am the first American baby named for the great general, we think.

My mamma was Pauline Fosburgh and we live in Rutland. My daddy went away before I came, but I know he is a big, brave soldier, and I'm going to grow up to be big like him. Already I weigh sixteen pounds, and I'm growing bigger every day.

Some record for a six-weeks-old youngster, isn't it.

SAY CRUELTIES KILLED 2 AT CRANSTON

Rhode Island Penal Board Investigates Charges by State Prison Guards

Providence, R. I., May 22.—Charges that two prisoners at Cranston State Prison recently died from ill treatment are being investigated by the Penal Board.

The charges are made by a guard and former guard at the prison. Their accusations include the following chief points:

That Edward Myers, prisoner, was kept in a straitjacket until he was so weak that he had to be carried to the prison hospital, where he died three weeks later from the effects of his punishment.

That Myers' death was given out as caused by erysipelas.

That William Sheldon, prisoner, was stripped, taken to a dark cell, chained to the cell door and fed insufficiently on bread and water.

That, following three days of this, Sheldon was taken to the hospital, where he died in two weeks.

That Sheldon's death was reported as due to double pneumonia.

Members of the Penal Board, on one of their visits to the prison yesterday, heard something about these alleged abuses. When they returned here they began quiet inquiry.

Today a prison guard and a man who had been a guard, but who was discharged yesterday, made the charges stated above to a reporter. The guard, who had just been discharged, said he believed that his dismissal was due to suspicion by the prison officials that he had been talking about prison conditions.

There has long been demand for such investigation. State Senator William G. Troy, minority leader, has repeatedly demanded one, but has also declared that the Republican majority did not dare to expose the prison mismanagement.

WOUNDED IN FRANCE, RE-ENLISTS WITH BRITISH

Logan N. Woodside, No. 49 Samoset street, Dorchester, who served eighteen months in France and was discharged because of wounds, re-enlisted today at the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission, No. 44 Bromfield street. He was badly wounded by shrapnel while fighting on the Somme in August, 1916.

"I do not care particularly what they do with me as long as I have been allowed to get back into khaki," he said. "I feel ashamed of myself walking about the streets without a uniform on, especially now that I am physically fit."

The Red Cross is your representative overseas. Its greatly humane work for the soldiers in the field and for the refugees driven from their homes by the invader is the one branch of war work in which each and every one of us should glory to take a part. Not every one can join the colors, not every family can have even one member in the service, but every individual in the country can be represented "over there" by the Red Cross.

You don't want your representative to go ill-equipped, with insufficient supplies for the work that must be done. We must see to it that the Red Cross is so lavishly furnished with the wherewithal to carry out its great charity that we will be satisfied to have done our part through its agency. Compare this purpose with whatever other use you have in mind for your money, and then decide which is the worthier.

$62,000 FOR RED CROSS FROM 'OUT THERE'

By FRED J. McISAAC.

More than $62,000 was raised for the Red Cross at a wonderful performance of "Out There" at the Boston Opera House last night. A dozen celebrated stage stars were in the cast of Hartley Manners's little play of the Red Cross and English recruiting.

The receipts for the sale of tickets, with premiums, came to $14,000. An autographed program netted $11,000, and was purchased by William Landsey. A necklace anonymously contributed, brought a thousand, and other pledges brought the total to $62,000, which is $20,000 more than was gained in New York or any other city visited.

Everyone whose name means anything in Boston was present and the atmosphere was electric, so great was the sympathy between audience and actors.

"Out There" is not a great play from a technical standpoint, but it has a scene in a hospital which is superbly realistic, and amazingly good entertainment. It offered George M. Cohan, Chauncy Olcott, James K. Hackett, George McFarlane, and O. P. Heggie excellent opportunity for character work as wounded soldiers. Lauretta Taylor, as the earnest and faithful little Cockney hospital drudge, made a very striking impression.

George Arliss as a medical officer, James T. Powers in a cockney role, H. P. Warner as the slacker, Helen Ware as a thoughtless munition worker, Julia Arthur as a nurse, and Beryl Mercer as a gin-soaked old woman, all distinguished themselves.

Burr McIntosh as the auctioneer who secured over $12,000 for a program, performed a valiant deed. Mrs. Fiske made a stirring address, and Eleanora de Cisneros sang delightfully.

KILLED IN 32-STORY FALL IN ELEVATOR WELL

New York, May 22.—Frederick Nickels, twenty, an elevator operator in the Adams Express Company building at No. 61 Broadway, was killed in a fall of thirty-two stories down an elevator shaft. Nickels and other operators were racing to see who could dress first and get into the elevator after work. Nickels was first and rushed to take the elevator to the street. It is believed he stepped into the open shaft.

Filene's —"My last dollar for the Red Cross and my life for America"— wrote a young Greek

NOT ONLY did he write, but he acted. The dollar bill, the last he had, was enclosed with the note and sent to the Red Cross. Then, without a penny in his clothes he enlisted. Today he lies convalescing in a hospital in France, after being wounded, getting better to go back and make another attempt at giving his life for America.

In the face of sacrifices like this: can't you well afford to DOUBLE your subscription?

TRENCHES

A CABLEGRAM just received from our Paris office informs us that they are co-operating with the Red Cross and the Knights of Columbus organizations in France in purchasing goods in Paris.

This means that these big organizations (in addition to the Y. M. C. A. which we have been working with for some time) have turned to the Filene Paris Shopping Service to co-operate in the purchase of things in Paris.

The Filene Paris Shopping Service is becoming a great figure in the work of making the soldiers' path easy. It is practically impossible to send goods from here. The Filene Paris Soldier Shopping Service offers the most satisfactory way of getting goods to the trenches.

It is performing a great service for soldiers. It is making the way easier for fathers and mothers.

Let us help you get gifts to YOUR soldier.

'L' ROAD NOW IN CONTROL OF THE PEOPLE

Governor presented two quill pens he had used to Senator MacPherson and Representative Worrall. He then shook hands with the senator, and said:

"I congratulate you and the other gentlemen on the hard work you have done in this matter."

SERVICE-AT-COST PLAN.

The bill provides for operation of the Elevated under the service-at-cost plan.

It provides that five public trustees shall control and operate the road.

These five trustees are to be appointed by the Governor.

The private directors of the Elevated step out. Into their places step the public trustees with complete authority to operate the system in such manner as they deem advisable for the public interest.

In return, the stockholders who thus give up the property to public control, will be paid a dividend ranging from 5 to 6 per cent. a year.

The sum of $2,000,000 will be raised to purchase rolling stock and to improve the surface railroad system.

The bill, in its final stage, was passed by the Senate last Friday, by a vote of 27 to 6. The House had previously passed it, 120 to 23.

While the present bill represents a compromise between conflicting opinions and interests, it stands as a tremendous piece of constructive legislation.

By International News Service.

Washington, May 22.—Reports of contributions to the second war fund drive of the American Red Cross, received at the national headquarters today, indicated that far more than the desired $100,000,000 would be secured.

ORDERS TO FLY FLAG OF ITALY ON MAY 24

Washington, May 22.—For the first time in history every diplomatic and consular office of the United States abroad will fly the flag of a foreign country when they display the Italian ensign on orders from the State Department Friday. This is to be part of a world-wide celebration of the anniversary of Italy's entry into the war, May 24.

All government buildings throughout the country have been ordered to display the Italian flag, and the Governors of all States have been asked by the State Department to cooperate in the celebration.

PUT PATRIOTISM AHEAD OF PROFITS

Washington, May 22.—The War Department has discovered at least one firm that puts patriotism ahead of profits. A New York silk trading corporation, it is announced, has reduced its commission from 2½ per cent. to 3 per cent., saving the government some $200,000 on cartridge cloth contracts now being filled. Because of the prompt government payments and equitable requirements, the firm decided it could operate on a closer margin.

"CAPTAINS" TO GOVERN DISTRICTS IN BOHEMIA

Berne, via Paris, May 22.—The official Austrian Legal Bulletin, according to Vienna dispatches, publishes a ministerial order setting up twelve districts in Bohemia to be governed by captains, the rights of the ministries to be transferred to them. The Austrian government hopes to reestablish order in Bohemia, where the situation has been turbulent for some days, owing to the food situation, peace and anti-German riots.

LIBERTY BONDS WELCOMED BY RED CROSS

today Scott called to see me again from Chaumont, and I am sure of the wonderful activity of the Red Cross, not only for this organization, but for all the American troops who are here.

"Because of the great volume of work in tabulation delays have arisen in the acknowledgement of gifts. Contributions were made to us in good faith, and we are rapidly as possible, have not been able to get through the whole list to date.

"The heaviest pressure in the tabulations will come, perhaps, toward the end of the week, when the day's pay gifts of thousands of workmen become available. These are for the most part held back till pay day, which in most industrial establishments comes at the end of the week. The tremendous number of such contributions already received, however, shows that the drive is going to reach out among the people to a remarkable degree.

"Because of the delay in tabulation and the desire on the part of the executive committee in charge to catch up with the progress of the drive, the latest figure wired to Washington for New England's contribution to date is only 1,324,000, been decided whether the two pounds about 6000 more than the figure given out last night.

If the contributions were completely tabulated and recorded a much larger figure would be shown, but the acknowledgments will be made later for any gifts not yet included in the total.

Two more towns are officially reported "over the top." The actual number is much larger, but definite figures have not been received. These towns are Pinkham, N. H., which, with a quota of 1800, has raised $841, and Merrimack, in this State, which has raised $1,566, just topping its quota of $1,350.

Partial reports show good gains in the Fall River and Haverhill districts. In the former, where the quota is $100,000, the campaign has raised $35,-200, and the latter $25,687, or 53 per cent. quota of $67,000, has been rais ed. Haverhill city has raised $28,600, or more than 56 per cent. of its $50,000 quota.

Much interest has been manifested in the contest to name four new ships of the merchant marine and in the plan to auction off two pounds of wool from the backs of the sheep on the White House lawn at Washington.

The contest to name the ships is open to anyone—individuals, cities, towns, lodges or industrial organizations. It is a job for the highest bidder. The bids should go to R. W. Trafford at the Red Cross headquarters, accompanied by 10 per cent. of the amount of the bid in each. The unsuccessful bidders will get their deposits back unless they are willing to turn them in as Red Cross contributions.

As yet, the wool has not reached Boston, but it is expected tonight. There are twelve sheep this year on the White House lawn. They have just been sheared and two pounds of wool sent to each State Governor. Mr. Call will auction this on the Common Friday noon, but it has not yet will be offered in one lot or divided into small packets and sold to a number of bidders.

The wool men of Boston will attend the auction in force, marching from the South station, headed by a band.

The successful bidder for the wool in each State will receive an autograph letter from the President and Mrs. Wilson. The scene of the auction will be the Red Cross court on the common.

A wool firm is numbered among the largest contributors to the fund to-day—Eisemann Brothers—who have pledged $10,000. Herbert M. Sears has also pledged $10,000. Hallowell, Jones & Donald and the J. Koshland Company have given $10,000 each.

It has been announced that owing to a decision of the Postmaster General it will not be possible to accept war savings certificates or thrift stamps as contributions to the Red Cross. This ruling does not apply to Liberty Bonds, which will be accepted.

A Drop On a Touchy Corn

Instant relief! Then corn or callus lifts off with fingers.

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without one twinge of pain.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it Freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of Freezone for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful! It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, as well as painful 'calluses,' lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. Women should keep a tiny bottle on their dresser and never let a corn ache twice.—Advertisement.

SUES ESTATE OF SON FOR MOTHER'S BOARD BILL

The Supreme Court will decide certain points of law in the suit of Walter H. Lyons of Randolph against the estate of his brother-in-law, the late George O. Wales, of Braintree, to recover for bock board and care of the testator's mother, Mrs. Isabella C. Wales. Judge Dana of the Superior Court ordered the jury to return a verdict for the defendant.

Mr. Lyons, who is the husband of Mrs. Wales' daughter, sought to recover the sum of $11,700 for her board and care from December 10, 1904, up to January 13, 1913, when the son died, charging at the rate of $25 a week. Mrs. Wales, who is ninety years old, still lives with the Lyons family.

An agreement contracted by the son and his parents, dated May 29, 1901, which was found in the Wales homestead, showed that Mr. and Mrs. Wales had transferred all their property, comprising several thousand dollars, to their son, with the understanding that $20 a month be paid to either of them during life.

BILL PERMITS TOWNS TO LEASE PROPERTY TO U. S.

The committee on cities reported a bill on the petition of Mayor Edwin O. Childs and City Solicitor Edwin B. Bishop of Newton that cities and towns are authorized during the continuance of the war, to enter into contracts for the use and occupation by the United States of any property, real or personal, owned or held by such city or town, for the furnishing of instruction, training, lodging and maintenance of persons who are in or who are preparing to enter the service of the United States.

Cities and towns may raise and appropriate money outside of any limits imposed by law upon their tax rates or debts, but any bond or note or certificate of indebtedness issued for such purpose shall be payable in not more than five years from the date of its issue.

FIVE BUILDINGS DAMAGED BY FIRE AT BEACHMONT

A number of families were driven to the street in night clothing, and the entire Washington square section of Beachmont threatened by a fire of unknown origin which destroyed five buildings early today.

Assistance was summoned from Winthrop and Chelsea to fight the flames which caused damage estimated by the police at $50,000.

MEN FRIENDS OF LIPSETT GIRL SOUGHT

Police Question Garage Owners About Companions Who Rode With Her

Garage keepers in Brighton and Allston have been questioned by the police for information concerning the young men who at different times occupied a seat in the automobile driven by Miss Nellie Lipsett, nineteen, who was found dead by her sister, Miss Ruth Lipsett, in the apartment which the girls shared on the first floor of No. 1722 Commonwealth avenue.

Miss Lipsett was an adept in driving the car, which was of a grayish color, and often invited her young men friends to accompany her. She did a great deal of traveling in this car, and about six weeks ago, it is stated, was in New York.

TRACE TRIPS IN CAR.

The police, it is stated, have traced her trips in the machine with a view to learning if one of her male friends became enamored of her to such an extent that he promised to marry her and then called it off at the last moment.

That the theory of a wedding entered into the case is, in part, borne out by the fact that last Friday Miss Lipsett took a blue dress she had bought to a tailor on Sutherland road for alterations. She told the tailor that she recently moved to Allston and expected to stay there a short while.

"She was in the best of spirits and very pretty," said the tailor, who manages the Aberdeen Tailoring Company at No. 151 Sutherland road, a block away from her home. "She impressed me as if she were going to take a trip somewhere after the dress was altered.

SAW GIRL IN YARD.

Mrs. John A. O'Shea, Jr., who with her husband occupy the apartment above the one where Miss Lipsett is alleged to have shot herself, was home all last Monday and did not hear a shot fired. She says she saw Nellie Lipsett about 10 a. m., Monday in the yard shaking clothes.

"She wore a pink kimona and appeared well," said Mrs. O'Shea. "The first I knew of any trouble was when I saw the police leaving the house. That was about 6:30 p. m. Some time later in the evening I learned that the girl was shot in the temple and had died."

"I had the trouble for most two years before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one fifty-cent box of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Agnes Haleks, Pleasant View Ave., Bristol, Conn., Oct. 5, 1917.

A. A. U. IS STILL MYSTIFIED BY DURACK CASE

New York, May 22.—Full details of a sanction by the Australian Swimming Association to Fanny Durack for her American tour, which have been mailed to the Amateur Athletic Union, according to a cablegram received here, are expected to clear up the mystery surrounding the case.

Miss Durack is at present en route to the United States, where she has an ambitious schedule of exhibition and match races arranged, most, if not all, of which will have to be cancelled as the A. A. U. has withdrawn its sanction in view of the action of the Australian association with which it affiliates.

The cablegram reads as follows: "Association considers impossible in best interests of amateurism to sanction appearance of ladies. Full details by letter."

The situation is particularly confusing and embarrassing to the A. A. U. officials, as it is expected that Miss Durack and her escort or chaperone will arrive at a Pacific Coast port several weeks before the receipt of the letter containing the details upon which a refusal of sanction was based by the Antipodean authorities.

TECH TENNIS TEAM IS DUE FOR SPICY RATING

Because of its splendid showing, Tech claims second place in the intercollegiate tennis championship rating. The team's only defeat was by the strong Yale four.

Tech was handicapped against the Elis by not having Brockmann, who has since proven his ability. He is a member of the doubles' team, which defeated Bates and won the New England title.

Up to date Tech has the admirable record of winning the New England Intercollegiates and six out of its seven individual team matches. The varsity team plays Worcester Polytechnic Saturday.

SHIPBUILDER JACKSON ESCAPES ARMY DRAFT

Greenville, S. C., May 22.—Joe Jackson, former star outfielder of the Chicago Americans, has been certified to the local draft exemption board, which has ordered him to report for military duty, as being in the employ of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

This certificate stays the order of the local board calling Jackson, and places him in the classification of necessary employes. As he is employed in shipbuilding on the Delaware, he probably will not be subject to the draft.

HARVARD CUBS LOSE CRACK ATHLETE

The chance that Harvard 1921 had to defeat its Yale rivals in track athletics at New Haven next Saturday now appears to be very slim indeed, with the announcement at Cambridge today that Edward O. Gourdin, the fleet sprinter and jumper, would not make the trip to Yale's field.

Gourdin is not a member of Harvard's R. O. T. C., nor physically disabled, and this has become ineligible for competition against the Blue.

It was only this week that the discovery was made that Gourdin was not doing military work. This caused the decision that will very likely deprive Harvard of what chance her freshman athletes had of humbling the Blue, but it was the only way out of the matter since there is an understanding between the "Big Three," so called that only members thus enrolled can meet in their dual or triangular major sport competition.

Harvard Is to Send Fifteen Track Men to Title Games

Fifteen members of the Harvard varsity track team will take part in the annual intercollegiates, on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, May 31 and June 1. The Harvard athelete authorities decided against entering the track team as a whole because of the poor showing made this season. The Crimson entries are:

100 and 220-yard dashes, W. R. Swart and F. F. Williams.
440-yard run, H. D. Costigan and D. J. Desmond.
Mile run, F. E. Lucas and D. J. Duggan.
Two-mile run, C. H. Cushing and G. F. Wason.
Hurdles, F. C. Fishback and T. M. Atkinson.
Pole vault, J. J. Albright.
Shotput, C. D. Flynn, J. F. Linder and C. F. Batchelder.
Hammer throw, A. Stevens and C. D. Flynn.

WHITTEMORE ELECTED HARVARD GOLF LEADER

George A. Whittemore of Brookline has been elected captain of the Harvard golf team. He prepared for college at Browne and Nichols School, and is a member of the Harbert Cricket Club, where the greater part of his golfing has been done.

The Harvard team will close its season Saturday with a match against Yale at Greenwich, Ct.

ROUSING FINISH GAINS A DRAW FOR BROOKS

By J. P. MURPHY.

After taking everything Pete Hartley had in five of the first seven rounds, Terry Brooks of the West End made one of those Garrison finishes and by so doing earned a draw with his cotton-topped foe in the final bout of ten rounds, at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Arena.

Hartley had Brooks all at sea in the early rounds, stabbing him continually with a stiff left and occasionally crossing his right. But Brooks took it all gamely and then turned and gave the southpaw some of his own medicine.

The West Ender badly belabored Hartley in the last three chappers, and, at times, had him in a wobbly way. In the heat of the excitement, Hartley struck Brooks low at least three times, this undoubtedly counting against him in Terry Conley's final tab.

Tommy Elm of Paterson, N. J., gained a draw with Johnny Buckley of South Boston, in the ten-round semi-final. As in their previous setto, the boys fought carefully throughout, too carefully in fact, to suit the bulk of the house.

At that, it was a much better mill than it looked to be and furnished plenty of sport, particularly in the last round when both battlers hit it up in high.

Kid Henry of Newark, N. J., annihilated Billy Meyers of Boston, in the first ten-rounder, while Panama Joe Gans won a decision over Joe Rivers of Gloucester, in the eight-round curtain-raiser.

JOE MOONEY FAILS TO GO ROUTE WITH BRITT

New Bedford, May 22.—With both eyes closed and the blood streaming from several cuts, Joe Mooney, Brooklyn featherweight, fought like a wild cat when his handlers jumped into the ring in the sixth round to save him from further punishment at the hands of Frankie (Young) Britt at the Whaling A. C.

Britt was on top of Mooney all the time. The Brooklyn boy was knocked through the ropes twice and several times was backed helpless into a corner.

Bobby Dyson of this city, won from Young Chick of Fair Haven, in eight rounds in the semi-final.

The Naval Cadet School Permanent Detail Crew defeated the Provost Guard of the Public School in a ten-oared cutter race on the Charles River today.

NEWTON HIGH PLAYER BREAKS LEG ON FIELD

Henry Garrity, third baseman of the Newton High nine and one of the best halfbacks in New England football circles, broke his left leg when sliding into the plate in the sixth inning of the game with Boston College High, at Newtonville.

Sawyer was batting and the signal was passed for "the squeeze." Garrity dashed for the plate as Pitcher Shannon wound up. Sawyer bunted the ball, and, when Garrity started his slide, his left leg was caught in such a manner it snapped between the ankle and knee.

The game was a battle royal and won by Newton, 3-2. Sawyer was steadier than Shannon in the pinches.

Wadek Zbyszko is inclined to be fussy over permitting John Freburg to experiment with his new hold in the match at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night. Miss Ellam Advises Taking an "Account of Stock" Before Seeking a Situation

TWO women started out the other day, inspired to patriotism, both intent upon going into some form of war industry and each to do her part in the winning of the war. Happy Jack Squirrel's Thrift Club

By Thornton W. Burgess

Peter Rabbit Tries Hard to Be Thrifty

If ever in all the Great World there was a surprised Rabbit that one was little Mrs. Peter when Peter suddenly announced that he was going to lay up a store of food for the Winter just as Happy Jack Squirrel and his relatives do.

"You see," explained Peter, as he sat in his favorite place in the dear Old Briar-patch chewing the end of a stem of clover, "I've come to the conclusion that after all there is nothing quite like thrift. Yes, my dear, that is the conclusion I have come to. You know how it is in winter with us; we live from hand to mouth. We seldom have a square meal and when we do we never know where the next one is coming from. Now see how different is it with Happy Jack and Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Striped Chipmunk and Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and some others I might name. While food is plentiful they lay up plenty for the future, and so they never go hungry no matter what the weather is. That is thrift, my dear, thrift. I am inclined to think it is a very good thing, and something we ought to practice. We will begin today by cutting some sweet clover for next Winter."

"We will do nothing of the kind," declared little Mrs. Peter with more promptness. "If you were Peter, I don't suppose [illegible] but you needn't expect me to be. I love under the sun do you get such foolish notions in that silly head of yours?"

That being something Peter couldn't answer he didn't try to. Finding that Mrs. Peter meant just what she said he went off to the sweet-clover patch by himself and set to work cutting sweet clover. Peter is very fond of sweet clover and as he cut it he ate some. "It will do no harm to fill my stomach first," thought Peter. Now it sometimes seems as if Peter's stomach is the biggest part of him. Anyway it takes a lot to fill it, and as Peter didn't know how to really work the sweet clover disappeared almost as fast as he cut it.

So Peter looked this way and looked that way to make sure that no danger was in sight, stuffed himself comfortably, and closed his eyes. In less than a jiffy he was fast asleep.

Presently Sammy Jay happened along by the Old Briar-patch and spied little Mrs. Peter. "Hello, Mrs. Peter. Where is Peter?" said he.

Little Mrs. Peter nodded in the direction of the sweet clover patch. "Over there being thrifty," she replied just a wee bit sorrowfully.

"What was that you said?" asked Sammy Jay as if he thought he couldn't have heard aright.

"I said he is over there trying to be thrifty," snorted Mrs. Peter rather sharply. "Where he got any such foolish notion as that into his head is more than I can understand," she added.

Now Sammy Jay had heard how badly Peter wanted to join Happy Jack's Thrift Club and he guessed right away what had started Peter to trying to be thrifty. Sammy's eyes twinkled. He spread his blue wings and flew over to the sweet-clover patch. There sat Peter in the warm sunshine fast asleep. Sammy had to fly his very best to get far enough away to laugh without waking Peter. Then he hurried over to the Green Forest to tell Happy Jack Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel and all the others how Peter Rabbit was trying to be thrifty by taking a nap in the sweet-clover patch. Everybody thought that was the very best joke ever and they laughed themselves almost sick.

Peter continued to sit in the sweet-clover patch and dream pleasant dreams until Danny Meadow Mouse happened along and tickled his nose with a straw. "Kechow!" sneezed Peter.

"Hello, Peter. What are you up to?" asked Danny Meadow Mouse, his sharp little eyes twinkling with mischief.

"Getting ready for next Winter," replied Peter very importantly. "I'm cutting a supply of food to put away for the time when food will be scarce. You know there is nothing like thrift Danny."

Danny looked at the very small pile of wilted sweet clover and suddenly changed the subject. "I must hurry along," said he, "for I've got some work to do myself."

As soon as he was sure Peter couldn't see him Danny lay right down and rolled over and over with laughter. As for Peter he worked a little, ate a little, dozed a little and finally carried a little, a very little bundle of sweet clover back to the dear Old Briar-patch.

In spite of Peter's never-ending appetite and his long naps the pile of clover under the bramble-bush grew until it was really quite a respectable pile. Then Peter went over to the Green Forest to tell Happy Jack about it and ask him to come over and see that pile of sweet clover as a proof that he was thrifty. Happy Jack was too busy to go over to the dear Old Briar-patch.

When Sammy Jay got there Peter shoved him the pile of clover under the bramble-bush. Such a sight as it was! It had been rained on with every passing shower; jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun had heated it through at other times; never once had Peter thought of turning it over and spreading it out to dry. The result was that it was sour, had begun to rot at the bottom, smelled badly, and was wholly useless. Sammy Jay opened his mouth to jeer at Peter and make fun of him, but when he saw how anxiously Peter was waiting for what he might say he simply told Peter that he would tell Happy Jack just what Peter had done. Then Sammy hastened back to the Green Forest.

The next day Peter ran over to call on Happy Jack to see if now he might be admitted to Happy Jack's Thrift Club. He could hardly believe those long ears of his when Happy Jack said no.

"Why not?" demanded Peter. "Hasn't Sammy Jay told you about that pile of clover under the bramble-bush in the dear Old Briar-patch? Wasn't I thrifty to cut and store all that? Why can't I belong to your old club?"

Happy Jack shook his head. "Peter," said he, "you haven't yet learned the meaning of the word thrift. Sammy Jay told me all about that pile of clover. He told me how it had gone to waste because it wasn't properly taken care of. Doing useless things, no matter how hard you work, is waste of time and not thrift. And allowing a lot of good food to spoil is the very worst kind of thriftlessness. The trouble with you, Peter, is that you didn't begin young enough to learn how to be thrifty. Now you are too old to learn, I guess. It's too bad, Peter; it's too bad. There is nothing like learning thrift when you are young. It will help all your life. Oh thriftless, thriftless, heedless Peter,
A pity 'tis you are not neater,
Pay thrift and neatness go together,
Though bright or stormy be the weather.

"But we love you just the same, Peter, and we're sorry you can't join our club," concluded Happy Jack.

Peter started to be angry, thought better of it, couldn't think of anything to say, and finally started for the dear Old Briar-patch to do some more thinking.

DEMOCRACY — BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 22, 1918. — LIBERTY

STIFF TRAINING FOR BOYS OF 76TH

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, May 22.—Commencing next week the members of the 76th Division will experience the most intensive training they have yet gone through. The division is expected to be filled to its full war strength by the end of the month and it is generally believed that the vacancies in "Boston's Own" will be filled with New England men who will come to this cantonment in the draft commencing Saturday.

The last of the men from Camp Upton reached here today and went through the same process of registration and physical examination that the two previous delegations from Yaphank experienced. A large percentage of these New York men have been assigned to the 304d Infantry, commanded by Colonel J. F. Preston. This is the New York regiment which is composed mostly of men from upper New York State.

The Connecticut men who were sent here from Camp Upton have been placed in the 304th Infantry, commanded by Colonel J. K. Hyer, and each of these regiments received about the same number of men. It will take practically all of the Upton men to bring these regiments up to their required strength and the rest of the division will probably be filled by the men who come here in the next draft and with those from the depot brigade.

The rookies who will come here during the five-day period beginning Saturday must be physically perfect. Only those who are able to qualify for service overseas will be accepted by the army surgeons, and the same is true of the men in the depot brigade destined for transfer into the division. There are several hundred in the depot brigade who will not be in shape for service with any line organization for several months, and these men are not expected to be moved until they are fit.

The Upton men in appearance suffer by comparison with the New England men. They are also lacking in military knowledge, but it is not expected to be long before they are rounded into shape. The work will be rushed at top speed, and everything possible will be done to give the new men the benefit of the eight months of training the other men of the division have received in as short a time as possible.

CANTEEN GIVES SAILORS REAL HOME FUN

By HAZEL BARNES.

As you stroll down Boylston street of an evening, you will probably notice just above Berkeley street, a small shop with a group of sailors outside gazing through the open door. You will see a large sign overhead with the words, "Canteen for Sailors."

The strain of a rollicking song of the sea floats out to you, and grins illuminate the faces of the sailor lads.

"Let's go in," says one of them.

"Huh, Bill, what do you say?" "Bill" nods, and they pass through the door. You watch them wistfully for a moment, then as you continue on your way, devotedly wishing that you, too, could be a sailor's suit, and join the jolly crowd at the piano. But if, despite the fact that you were neither soldier nor sailor, you did venture in, you would feel afterwards as I did, that it had been an evening well spent.

SOMETHING LIKE HOME.

The canteen is held in the War Service Shop, which is a branch of the Women's Equal Suffrage League. Here on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, boys from the Radio School, Commonwealth Pier, Bumkin Island, and other naval training schools, gather for an evening's entertainment. It is the nearest approach to anything "like home" that has been offered to them since they arrived in Boston.

Each night the canteen is in charge of a hostess, with two or more assistants. She brings with her a group of girls to entertain, not the fluffy sort, but girls who will be "chummy" with the boys, and with whom they can have a jolly good time.

"Do you find that the same boys come back often?" I asked Miss Alice Spaulding, who was hostess for the evening.

BOYS HAVE FREE REIN.

"That's exactly what we do find, and that is also why we feel that the canteen has been so successful. She said enthusiastically. "I think that one reason is that we let them do just what they want to. If one boy wants to drum on the piano, he does it. If another feels like dancing, we introduce him to a girl and they dance. Then some of them play games all evening.

"And we let them smoke, which pleases them. Look at them now." She added, as a group of sailors signified their hearty approval by tapping the floor with their feet in perfect time to its lively tune.

A boy and girl were bent seriously over a checker-board on one table, only lifting their heads to applaud the singer. On the other side of the table, another lad was mystifying one of the girls with his latest card tricks.

Down in the far corner of the room, where refreshments are served, a jolly Jack Tar, attired in a blue gingham apron, was helping to make things ship-shape, by wiping the dishes. All through the process, he executed a few graceful steps from the latest dance (maybe) much to the amusement of the girls, and to the danger of the plate. Everywhere there was perfect comradeship.

DORCHESTER WHIST TO AID BOYS OVERSEAS

The Octagon Club of Dorchester will hold a whist party in North End Hall tomorrow evening to raise funds for the boys across the sea. It enables them to keep a little something out of the ordinary in their pack when marching or in the trenches. The ladies interested in the affair are Mrs. W. Smith, Mrs. M. Dailey, Mrs. Edward Lennon, Mrs. Harry Hall, Mrs. J. Howers, Mrs. George Bussington, Mrs. William Sears, Mrs. Fred Long, Mrs. Eddie Ball and Mrs. John Nickerson.

Officers Plan Reunion

The Dorchester High school regiment officers' reunion will be held in Station Hall, Dorchester. The Quota Club House, Centre street on Friday. The committee in charge is Colonel Charles K. Darling, Lieutenant Colonel Philip S. Nichols, Captain Horace G. Knowles, Captain James Henry, Captain George C. Marsiair and Captain George H. Mains.

PRINTING PLANT AT PIER TO BE ENLARGED

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, May 22.—If plans now under consideration are carried out, one of the largest printing establishments in the navy will be set up on board the Receiving Ship under the general supervision of Lieutenant H. W. Nelson.

It is planned to have practically all of the printing for the First Naval District done at this plant. At present there are plants at the Navy Yard, on Battery Wharf and at the Radio School in Cambridge, and considerable work is done under contract by civilian establishments.

By bringing all of this scattered work together in one plant it is believed that expense can be saved and that much more satisfactory work can be done.

The ship already has one of the best printing plants in the navy, but to accomplish the work that it is proposed to turn over to it, it will be necessary to increase the plant to about four times its present capacity.

The latest number of the Pier-E-Scope, the ship's semi-monthly magazine, just issued, is an example of the excellent work that is done at the printing plant. It is beyond question one of the most attractive looking magazine-appearing publications issued in the government service. In the past the columns of the magazine have been restricted to matters dealing with life aboard the ship. Beginning with the next issue the Pier-E-Scope will cover the whole of the First Naval District.

The office force of the ship's P. M. C. A. is somewhat disorganized. General Secretary George F. Sportsman is confined to his home on sick leave on Monday by his physician. Assistant Secretary David H. Beattie has recently departed to take up work at the Radio School in Cambridge, and Secretary "Slim" Martin, the old New England League ball player, is in the hospital suffering from an old injury to his leg.

TO PROHIBIT SALE OF GERMAN PUBLICATIONS

New Brunswick, N. J., May 22.—The sale or publication of any foreign language publications is to be proscribed here. The City Commission, at the request of the Chamber of Commerce, instructed City Attorney Thomas S. Haggerty to draw resolutions for adoption next week.

The Red Cross Represents Quality of Mercy

"Give Until It Hurts"—It Is One of the Ways That We Can Maintain Our Hold Upon Civilization

The Red Cross work is one of the very few great activities connected with this war which represents civilization and which keeps its hold upon the development through the centuries of men away from the beast. The Red Cross represents the quality of mercy which

Droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blest:
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When mercy seasons justice.

President Wilson tells us to give to the Red Cross until it hurts. It is one of the ways that we can maintain our hold on that civilization which has been slipping, slipping, slipping from the world in this barbarous, bestial struggle.

Public Control Bill Marks People's Awakening

State May Well Be Proud of Measure Which Turns Boston Elevated Over to the Public Representatives

Today Governor McCall signs the bill which takes the possession of the Boston Elevated Street Railway from its stockholders and private managers and turns it over to the public representatives. Thus Massachusetts makes a beginning of a great new and progressive departure in America towards better conditions in our financial and political life. For three generations the private companies performing the great vital functions of supplying transportation, light and power have been the great sources of financial and political scandal and corruption and of great economic injustice. While the operation and control of these great public service corporations remain in private hands it is impossible to have clean politics. It is impossible to expect that the best men will go into politics. It is impossible to expect just economic conditions, because with the control over politics which is exercised by these great public service corporations in private control the power of the government will be utilized to promote special privilege and to tax the many for the benefit of the few.

The leading civilized countries of the world already operate their own public utilities. The great countries in Europe, and even in the East in the British colonies and in Japan, operate their own public utilities, their telephone and telegraph companies, and their railroads, and generally their street railways and their gas and electric light companies. We have fallen far behind in the march of progress during the last thirty years, so long has lasted the strangle hold of these public service corporations upon our government. But now the times have changed. The American people are waking up. The national government has taken under control and is operating the national railroads. So long as the American people keep their sanity they will never give up the control of these railroads, but will purchase the property as quickly as they can.

The next step which the national government is about to take will be the acquisition of the telephone and telegraph companies. The Postmaster-General advocates it, and has demonstrated that the national government can operate them more cheaply and give better service than they are giving today under their private managers.

Now comes the great and conservative State of Massachusetts, leading, as she has led in so many great junctures of our national affairs, in this progressive movement toward the resumption by the public of public functions which ought never have been surrendered to private managers. Massachusetts is about to take her leading street railway. The Governor will appoint trustees, who will make it absolutely certain that the power of the Boston Elevated will never again be used to disturb our politics.

The bill which the Governor signs today is not a perfect bill. If the AMERICAN could have drafted its provisions, without reference to other considerations than its own views of the public interest, it would have omitted some features of the bill. It has some of the imperfections of a compromise, but it is still a great piece of constructive legislation. It is Massachusetts' important contribution to the renaissance of civic spirit, economic justice and political cleanliness. This plan, first suggested by the Massachusetts Public Service Commission and conscientiously labored over by Governor McCall, Attorney-General Attwill and the committee, will be copied in other parts of the country. Already in Chicago the leading progressives have their eyes upon this plan.

It is a constructive act of which, notwithstanding all its imperfections, Governor McCall, the Public Service Commission, Attorney-General Attwill, the legislative committees, the Legislature and Massachusetts may well be proud.

GARRETT P. SERVISS' ARTICLE

A Crooked and Dangerous Way to Get at the Truth—Putting Unwilling Witnesses Under the Influence of Ether to Uncover Their Mental Secrets

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Why is it that the law does not resort to the one certain method of establishing innocence or guilt? It is an admitted fact that under the influence of ether persons will tell things which otherwise would be hard to drag from them even by torture. The 'ravings' that we hear of are oftentimes revelations of closely guarded secrets. Having had a little personal experience myself and feeling certain that with just a little intelligent leading the subject will enter into any topic freely, it is a mystery to me why the law neglects this way to get at the truth.—E. W."

In the Middle Ages, when witnesses, or supposed witnesses, were not only put to the cruelest torture to extract "evidence" from them, but when questions of right and wrong, of truth and error, were also left to the decision of the sword or of fire or water, no doubt the power of ether to loosen the tongue of an unconscious witness would have been welcomed with acclaim. The fact that his mental machinery was not working under normal conditions, but was simply running wild, would probably have been entirely disregarded by his judges, at least when what he happened to say was what they wanted him to say.

The Legal Side

The wiser ones, even then, might have protested on the ground that a person under the influence of such a drug could only be likened to the pythoness, or priestess of Apollo, at Delphi. Intoxicated by the fumes from the mysterious cleft in the rock, above which she sat, and uttering prophetic-sounding phrases, or incomprehensible nonsense, or jingling doggerel, according to the way her mind happened to be bent at the moment, but the great multitude would have hailed the new method of getting "evidence" as a gift from God to aid the discovery of truth.

Today, however, when the use of torture has no legal recognition and when we are supposed no longer to call upon chance to decide knotty questions for us, the prime requisite for a witness is, or at least should be, the possession of a full comprehension of what he says. We do not accept the testimony of idiotic, weak-minded or insane persons (although either of them might, inadventently, tell the truth), because we cannot follow, or verify, the workings of their minds, while, on the other hand, we know that their mental operations are under no trustworthy guidance from themselves.

Psychology has advanced too far to suffer us to put any confidence in the utterances that come from the "speech centre" of an unhinged brain. The common saying that a drunken man will blurt out the truth has only a partial basis in fact. A man in that condition may tell the truth, and he may equally well tell an unmitigated falsehood. The human brain is a storehouse of countless impressions and memories, some the result of experience and others of imagination. When the central control is lost these things bubble at haphazard, and, the speech centre being stimulated, they find expression in words, without the slightest choice or selection being made by the personal consciousness. It is, then, just as likely that the unconscious or half-conscious person will set forth a purely imaginative memory as if it were the record of a fact as that he will utter an actual truth.

Room in Fiction

A man may dream that he is committing or has committed a theft or murder; suppose, then, that he should blurt out the memory of his dream either while asleep or when under the influence of whiskey or ether—would you accept that as a "confession" and hang him on it? He might have in the memory cells of his brain the impressions made by reading a vivid account of a crime, so realistically represented that the reader seemed himself to be playing an active part in the event. In a state of arrested consciousness he could make an discrimination between the pictures flitting through his mind and finding unhampered utterance through his ungoverned speech organs and might falsely accuse himself of crime. Facts and fancies all would come out helter skelter.

Looked at in this way it is clear that the word "ravings" is singularly appropriate for the utterances of one under the influence of ether, or a similar anaesthetic.

THE RED CROSS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE Red Cross of Mercy—the one dear tradition
That shines like a rainbow above the black storm,
For freeman or dupe of the monarch's ambition
It serves to the end where the War Devils form.
With the tenderness shown by a sister forgiving,
With all the soft sweetness a mother can show,
It comforts the dying and cares for the living—
An island of peace in an ocean of woe!

The Red Cross of Mercy—man's greatest assurance,
That Right is not rotting, that God is not dead—
With the softness of Strength, with patient endurance
It creeps to the soldier whose power is sped.
It laves the hot brow with the touch of a mother,
It closes brave eyes that are swimming with pain;
It comes as a friend or a sister or brother
And seeks out the wounded who rest with the slain.

The Red Cross of Mercy! The Cross of The Master!
It shines o'er the shambles the tempest has made;
It shines o'er despair and it shines o'er disaster
As shone the First Cross on dark Calvary's Grade.
Give! Give! Nor one patriot falters or pauses
In doing his mite for his brothers abroad,
For clear is the call of this greatest of causes—
The Red Cross of Mercy! The Red Cross of God!

IMPORTANCE OF HASTE UNKNOWN TO MANY

By Winifred Black

THE woman in the little cage at the hairdresser's shop looked almost worried to death.

She tied a knot in her forehead, made a little tight-shut purse of her mouth, shook her head, coughed, sighed, brushed an imaginary cobweb off her face, drummed with her pencil on her engagement book, took up the telephone receiver, put it down again, looked off into space, looked down, cleared her throat and played with the tassel on her dress—all almost exactly in the same minute.

"I don't know," she said hurriedly and her voice trembled when she said it. "There's a facial for 10, and a curl for 10:15, and a shampoo for 10:30, and I don't know how the girls — Mary, no, I mean Miss Johnson — no, never mind. Miss Patterson, can you — er, er—that's a—I wonder——"

And we two poor, everyday, ordinary mortals who were waiting to get a little plain, simple shampoo and the rest of it done felt all at once as if we were squirrels going round and round in a glittering cage, without any place to sit down and nothing to eat and no idea of a chance to rest.

When Miss Johnson and Miss Patterson and Miss Boclair and the rest of the misses had come and gathered and had had a worried consultation around the little cage it turned out that there really was plenty of time and plenty of room for us both, and when we went each into our own separate little coop and let down our hair we heard things about the woman in the cage.

Everyone Agitated

"She's awfully good," said Miss Anderson, "but, my, ain't she nervous!"

"She don't mean any harm," murmured Miss Patterson, "but, say, sometimes I feel as if I could fly when she gets me all twisted up that way. No, there's nothing particular on her mind. She has got nobody but herself to look after, and nothing to do but make appointments, and she tries to do the very best she can, but somehow she gets us all mixed up and twisted and turned around, and then she worries so about it that we can't even be mad at her. Ain't it terrible to be so nervous? If I'm here much longer I'll be going to a sanatorium myself."

"You needn't mind the facial," said I. "Just do my nails, and I'll come back some other time."

"You needn't mind manicuring," said my friend. "Just do my facial and I'll come back some other time."

And we both hurried through as fast as we could and got out into the street and took a long breath.

"Oh," said my friend, "if I had stayed in that place another minute I'd have begun biting my nails or twisting the fringe of my coat."

"I was tapping my foot," said I, "and I looked in the glass and found my face all tied up into a hard knot already. That's the reason I hurried out so fast."

So we went and sat down in a little park and watched a woman who was very black and very fat, and very comfortable and very busy going all still in one place for ten whole minutes and smile just to see the trees in blossom and smell the fragrance of Spring.

More Out of Life

I suppose the black woman really had a whole lot more to worry about than the woman in the cage. From her looks she probably had four or five persons to support somewhere, counting grandchildren and all, but, dear me, she never dreamed of worrying about it. She just went and did her work, and when she was tired she rested, and when she got rested she went back to work again. She laughed and ate and gossiped with those about her.

I don't know I think she's getting a whole lot more out of life than the nervous woman in the cage, or than any of the Miss This and Miss Thats who are subjected to the terrible contagion of restless nerves.

What are we all so nervous about, anyway? What good does it do us or anyone else? What do we gain by tapping and frowning, and twisting and turning, and walking up and down, and nodding our heads and coughing and clearing our throats, and playing with the tassels on our frocks, and tying and untying our belts?

CONSCIENCE POINTS OUR CONDUCT IN LIFE

By Elizabeth Jordan

Dear Miss Jordan:

Please write about conscience. What IS conscience? And why do some people have more of it than others? HENRY.

CONSCIENCE, Henry, is that faculty in us which enables us to judge the moral value of our own motives and actions, and to decide whether these are good or bad.

It is the "still, small voice" in us, heard only by our spiritual ears. It guides our actions if we are willing to be guided by our moral sense.

You had your first illustration of this, perhaps, when one day you ran away from school. You started off intending to go to school. You kissed your mother goodby and trotted away with your little lunch basket.

It was a beautiful day in June. You had to walk a mile to the schoolhouse, and everything along the roadside called to you. The woods that stretched to the right and left were green and cool. The brook that ran along beside you for part of your way seemed to be laughing at you for having to go to school.

Just then you met Georgie Jones. He had a fish line and a tin can full of worms. He wasn't going to school, he scornfully told you. He was going fishing. He dared you to go with him.

You hesitated. You wanted to go more than you had ever wanted to do anything. But it meant a bad time at home when you were found out. The thought of that bad time at home disturbed you. Perhaps it would take the form of a whipping.

Georgie Prevails

You thought it over. You decided that a day of fishing would be worth a whipping.

"All right," you said to Georgie. "I'll go!" The two of you started off with a whoop.

You had wonderful day, you and Georg! At noon there was your basket of lunch. It was a big lunch; bread and butter, apple pie, and doughnuts, packed by your mother's careful hands.

You shared it with Georgie, to the last crumb. And after the lunch you and Georgie lay beside the brook and talked. Yes, it was a great day. Not once during the glorious, sun-washed lunch of it did you feel that you were not doing right.

You saw to it that you were home by four o'clock. You walked in as if you had been at school. Your mother smilingly gave you the piece of bread and butter and the two huge doughnuts you always demanded after school. At first you were nervous, but as the evening wore on, you felt safe.

Your mother had no suspicion that you had played hookey. The teacher had not sent any of the other pupils to ask about you, on their way home, as she sometimes did. You were safe. You had had your day, and you would have no whipping.

Your mother asked you one or two questions about school—the kind she always asked. To answer them you had to lie to her. You did it.

Mother Wins

But something about the situation began to seem wrong. Your mother was so kind to you. She had given you such a bully supper—hot johnny cake and the other things you especially liked.

When you were in bed that night she came upstairs, as she often did, to see that you were all right. You were. You told her so. In your heart you wished she would go away, instead of sitting there smiling at you with that affectionate look in her brown eyes. You felt very queer—not exactly sick, but very uncomfortable.

You did not know it, Henry, but in that hour a conscience was born in you. It was there, and it had come to stay. In later years you may ignore it at times, but you could never again wholly forget it. After that, when you did wrong, you knew that it was wrong. Your conscience told you so. And often, many, many times, it kept you from doing wrong.

What is it, Henry? Oh, yes, those others. They are the unfortunates of life—the tragic men and women who have not been taught or would not learn how gloriously indispensable a possession a good conscience is.
